til each has suffered the greatest amount of damage that the pussion and energy of the other can inflict. Accordingly, we hear but Surretary of War announcing as a principle a international law, that neutrals may not recog nice a new government until that from which i has been severed has "thoroughly cuhansted" itself in the vain effort to commer its submission. We venture to say that this is the first time in history in which the doctrine has been annound with such latitude. It was certainly not the doctrine of the last century when France acknowledged the United colonies of America nor when Great Britain herself a few years sub acquently consented to their independence No British statesman will a lung that the American colonies achieved their independence by exhausting the resources and energies of the British empire. Nor was this the dectrine of Mr. Causing when he encouraged the first steps in revolution of the Spanish colonies, and "called a new world into existence" by recog migling these young nations at an early stage of their struggle, nor was it the doctrine on which the United States acted, under the elequent appeals of Henry Clay and others, in their prompt recognition of the Spanish republics, almost as soon as governments de facto, were established The great powers of Europe setsd upon so such tardy and lubuman principle in the affair of Belginm and Folland, which was not only a revolt of a province against the government established ever it, but a disturbance of the painful arrangements of the "Hoty Alliance." Nor did Engiand and France consider for a moment whether Turkey was exhausted when they took the struggling and exhausted Greeks by the hand and established them in a separate and in-
